Writing In Nonacademic Settings:

Writing in Non-academic Settings Lee Odell, Dixie Goswami, 1981 Writing in Nonacademic Settings Lee Odell, 1986-03-01 When we think of writing we tend to think of journalism fiction and poetry or academic articles and books forgetting that most writing is never intended for publication Rather it is prepared by white collar employees in the daily performance of their jobs Ironically until quite recently composition has been taught by academics who by and large were ignorant of the sorts of writing their students would be called upon to do after college in the extra university settings for which they were being prepared Recognizing the critical need among composition instructors for more specific information about nonacademic writing editors Odell and Goswami present the findings of leading investigators in composition research and suggest how these data might be used to inform writing curricula This volume offers important insights into the many contexts forms and audiences for nonacademic prose as well as the impact of new communications technologies on the writing process and the written document Providing a broadening of the concept of writing and the effect it has on workers in a wide range of settings this volume will be useful for composition researchers linguists students of survey methodology and all teachers of rhetoric and composition Writing in the Workplace Rachel Spilka, 1993 An anthology containing 19 previously unpublished contributions some reporting on workplace writing studies completed since the mid 1980s and others introducing new arguments about research to date and future research directions Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Nonacademic Writing Ann Hill Duin, Craig J. Hansen, 1996 First Published in 1995 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Reconceiving Writing, Rethinking Writing Instruction Joseph Petraglia, 2013-11-05 To a degree unknown in practically any other discipline the pedagogical space afforded composition is the institutional engine that makes possible all other theoretical and research efforts in the field of rhetoric and writing But composition has recently come under attack from many within the field as fundamentally misguided Some of these critics have been labelled New Abolitionists for their insistence that compulsory first year writing should be abandoned Not limiting itself to first year writing courses this book extends and modifies calls for abolition by taking a closer look at current theoretical and empirical understandings of what contributors call general writing skills instruction GWSI the curriculum which an overwhelming majority of writing instructors is paid to teach that practically every composition textbook is written to support and the instruction for which English departments are given resources to deliver The vulnerability of GWSI is hardly a secret among writing professionals and its intellectual fragility has been felt for years and manifested in several ways in persistently low status of composition as a study both within and outside of English departments in professional journal articles and conference presentations that are growing both in theoretical sophistication and irrelevance to the composition classroom and in the rhetoric and writing field s ever increasing attention to nontraditional sites of writing behavior But to date there has been relatively little concerted discussion within the writing field that focuses specifically on the fundamentally awkward relationship of writing theory and writing instruction This volume is the first to explicitly focus on the gap in the theory and practice that has emerged as a result of the field's growing professionalization The essays anthologized offer critiques of GWSI in light of the discipline's growing understanding of the contexts for writing and their rhetorical nature Writing from a wide range of cognitivist critical theoretical historical linguistic and philosophical perspectives contributors call into serious question basic tenets of contemporary writing instruction and provide a forum for articulating a sort of zeitgeist that seems to permeate many writing conferences but which has until recently not found a voice or a name

A Rhetoric of Doing Stephen Paul Witte, Neil Nakadate, Roger Dennis Cherry, 1992 Concerned with both the nature and the practice of discourse the eighteen essays collected here treat rhetoric as a dynamic enterprise of inquiry exploration and application and in doing so reflect James L Kinneavy's firm belief in the vital relationship between theory and practice his commitment to a spirit of accommodation and assimilation that promotes the development of ever more powerful theories and ever more useful practices A thorough introduction provides the reader with clear summaries of the essays by leading edge theorists researchers and teachers of writing and rhetoric A field context for the ideas presented in this book is provided through the division of the various chapters into four major sections that focus on classical rhetoric and rhetorical theory in historical contexts on dimensions of discourse theory aspects of discourse communities and the sorts of knowledge people access and use in producing written texts on writing in school related contexts and on several dimensions of nonacademic writing A fifth section contains a bibliographic survey and an appreciation of James Kinneavy's work The exceptional range of these essays makes A Rhetoric of Doing an ecumenical examination of the current state of mind in rhetoric and written communication a survey and description of what discourse and those in the field of discourse are in fact doing
