The Federalist Papers consist of 85 articles and essays written by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and John Jay promoting the ratification of the United States Constitution. Seventy-seven were published serially in The Independent Journal and The New York Packet between 1787 and 1788. Though the authors of the Federalist Papers foremost wished to influence the vote to ratify the Constitution in Federalist No. 1, they explicitly set that debate in broader political terms. At the time of publication, the authorship of the articles was a secret, although observers discerned the identities of Hamilton, Madison, and Jay.

The Federalist Papers are a series of 85 articles advocating the ratification of the United States Constitution. Seventy-seven of the essays were published serially in The Independent Journal and The New York Packet between October 1787 and August 1788. A compilation of these and eight others called The Federalist was published in 1788 by James and A. McLean. The Federalist Papers serve as a primary source for interpretation of the Constitution as they outline the philosophy and motivation of the proposed system of government. The authors of the Federalist Papers wanted to both influence the vote in favor of ratification and shape future interpretations of the Constitution. According to historian Richard B. Morris, they are an incomparable exposition of the Constitution, a classic in political science unsurpassed in both breadth and depth by the product of any later American writer.
