Time For Dying:

Time for Dying Barney G. Glaser, Anselm Leonard Strauss, Describes the comparative advantages of locating the dying patient in a hospital and at home and discusses methods of dealing with the moment of death Time for Dying Graham McAleer, Barney Glaser, 2017-09-29 This book has been written for those who must work with and give care to the dying Our discussion is not simple narrative or description it is a rendition of reality informed by a rather densely woven and fairly abstract theoretical scheme This scheme evolved gradually during the course of our research The second audience for this volume is social scientists who are less interested in dying than they are in useful substantive theory Our central concern is with the temporal aspects of work The theory presented here may be useful to social scientists interested in areas far removed from health medicine or hospitals The training of physicians and nurses equips them for the technical aspects of dealing with illness Medical students learn not to kill patients through error and to save lives through diagnosis and treatment But their teachers put little or no emphasis on how to talk with dying patients how or whether to disclose an impending death or even how to approach the subject with the wives husbands children and parents of the dying Students of nursing are taught how to give nursing care to terminal patients as well as how to give post mortem care But the psychological aspects of dealing with the dying and their families are virtually absent from training Although physicians and nurses are highly skilled at handling the bodies of terminal patients their behavior to them otherwise is actually outside the province of professional standards Much if not most nontechnical conduct toward and in the presence of dying patients and their families is profoundly influenced by common sense assumptions essentially untouched by professional or even rational considerations or by current advancement in social psychological knowledge The process of dying in hospitals is much affected by professional training and codes and by the particular conditions of work generated by hospitals as places of work A third important consideration in int Vick's Magazine ,1890 A System of Ethics Friedrich Paulsen, Frank Thilly, 1899 The Sunday Magazine ,1872 Time for Dying Barney G. Glaser, Anselm L. Strauss, 2007-01-01 This book has been written for those who must work with and give care to the dying Our discussion is not simple narrative or description it is a rendition of reality informed by a rather densely woven and fairly abstract theoretical scheme This scheme evolved gradually during the course of our research The second audience for this volume is social scientists who are less interested in dying than they are in useful substantive theory Our central concern is with the temporal aspects of work The theory presented here may be useful to social scientists interested in areas far removed from health medicine or hospitals The training of physicians and nurses equips them for the technical aspects of dealing with illness Medical students learn not to kill patients through error and to save lives through diagnosis and treatment But their teachers put little or no emphasis on how to talk with dying patients how or whether to disclose an impending death or even how to approach the subject with the wives husbands children and parents of the dying Students of nursing are taught how to give nursing care to terminal patients as well as how to give post mortem care But the psychological aspects of dealing with the dying and their families are virtually absent from training Although physicians and nurses are highly skilled at handling the bodies of terminal patients their behavior to them otherwise is actually outside the province of professional standards Much if not most nontechnical conduct toward and in the presence of dying patients and their families is profoundly influenced by common sense assumptions essentially untouched by professional or even rational considerations or by current advancement in social psychological knowledge The process of dying in hospitals is much affected by professional training and codes and by the particular conditions of work generated by hospitals as places of work A third important consideration in interpreting dying as a temporal process is that dying is a social as well as a biological and psychological process The term social underlines that the dying person is not simply leaving life Unless he dies without kin or friends and in such a way that his death is completely undiscovered his death is recorded His dying is inextricably bound up with the life of society however insignificant his particular life may have been or how small the impact his death makes upon its future course This aspect of dying is treated in relationship to what the authors call status passage Time for Dying is an illumination of the temporal features of dying in hospitals as related both to the work of hospital personnel and to dying itself as a social process Barney G Glaser is the founder of the Grounded Theory Institute in Mill Valley California and has also been a research sociologist at the University of California Medical Center San Francisco He is the author or coauthor of several books including The Grounded Theory Perspective II and Experts versus Laymen A Study of the Patsy and the Subcontractor published by Aldine Transaction Anselm L Strauss 1916 1996 was emeritus professor of sociology at the University of California San Francisco He was the author of numerous books including Professions Work and Careers Mirrors and Masks The Search for Identity and Creating Sociological Awareness Collective Images and Symbolic Representations all published in new editions by Transaction
