Women In Science Career Processes Outc:

Women in Science Yu Xie, Kimberlee A. Shauman, 2003 Why do so few women choose a career in science even as they move into medicine and law in ever greater numbers In one of the most comprehensive studies of gender differences in science careers ever conducted Women in Science provides a systematic account of how U S youth are selected into and out of science education in early life and how social forces affect career outcomes later in the science labor market Studying the science career trajectory in its entirety the authors attend to the causal influences of prior experiences on career outcomes as well as the interactions of multiple life domains such as career and family While attesting to the progress of women in science the book also reveals continuing gender differences in mathematics and science education and in the progress and outcomes of scientists careers The authors explore the extent and causes of gender differences in undergraduate and graduate science education in scientists geographic mobility in research productivity in promotion rates and earnings and in the experience of immigrant scientists They conclude that the gender gap in parenting responsibilities is a critical barrier to the further advancement of women in science

Advancing Women in Science Willie Pearson, Jr., Lisa M. Frehill, Connie L. McNeely, 2015-04-23 Many countries have implemented policies to increase the number and quality of scientific researchers as a means to foster innovation and spur economic development and progress To that end grounded in a view of women as a rich yet underutilized knowledge and labor resource a great deal of recent attention has focused on encouraging women to pursue education and careers in science even in countries with longstanding dominant patriarchal regimes Yet overall science remains an area in which girls and women are persistently disadvantaged This book addresses that situation It bridges the gap between individual and societal level perspectives on women in science in a search for systematic solutions to the challenge of building an inclusive and productive scientific workforce capable of creating the innovation needed for economic growth and societal wellbeing This book examines both the role of gender as an organizing principle of social life and the relative position of women scientists within national and international labor markets Weaving together and engaging research on globalization the social organization of science and gendered societal relations as key social forces this book addresses critical issues affecting women s contributions and participation in science Also while considering women s representation in science as a whole examinations of women in the chemical sciences computing mathematics and statistics are offered as examples to provide insights into how differing disciplinary cultures functional tasks and socio historical conditions can affect the advancement of women in science relative to important variations in educational and occupational realities Edited by three social scientists recognized for their expertise in science and technology policy education workforce participation and stratification this book includes contributions from an intellectually diverse group of international scholars and analysts and features compelling cases and initiatives from around the world with implications for research industry practice education and policy development

Motherhood, the Elephant in the Laboratory Emily Monosson, 2011-08-15

About half of the undergraduate and roughly 40 percent of graduate degree recipients in science and engineering are women. As increasing numbers of these women pursue research careers in science many who choose to have children discover the unique difficulties of balancing a professional life in these highly competitive and often male dominated fields with the demands of motherhood. Although this issue directly affects the career advancement of women scientists it is rarely discussed as a professional concern leaving individuals to face the dilemma on their own. To address this obvious but unacknowledged crisis the elephant in the laboratory according to one scientist Emily Monosson an independent toxicologist has brought together 34 women scientists from overlapping generations and several fields of research including physics chemistry geography paleontology and ecology among others to share their experiences. From women who began their careers in the 1970s and brought their newborns to work breastfeeding them under ponchos to graduate students today the authors of the candid essays written for this groundbreaking volume reveal a range of career choices the authors work part time and full time they opt out and then opt back in they become entrepreneurs and job share they teach high school and have achieved tenure. The personal stories that comprise Motherhood the Elephant in the Laboratory not only show the many ways in which women can successfully combine motherhood and a career in science but also address and redefine what it means to be a successful scientist. These valuable narratives encourage institutions of higher education and scientific research to accommodate the needs of scientists who decide to have children.

Women in Science and Engineering Cecily Cannan Selby, 1999 This volume comprises papers that assess whether where and how progress has taken place in the 25 years since the Academy held a conference entitled Women in Science Determinants of Success and recommend ways of accelerating it on the basis of research and the best practices to be found in corporate government and academic institutions. The participants and presenters come from large and small industries colleges and universities and government agencies they also represent a cross section of the scientific world ranging from student to Nobel laureate. The shared perspective of the conference was that increased diversity must be aided and abetted.

through substantive changes in the attitudes policies and practices that inform how we educate and evaluate the workforce and how we manage the workplace

Gendered Career Trajectories in Academia in Cross-national Perspective
Renata Siemieńska, Annette Zimmer, 2007 What are the academic career options for women in various European countries What has changed Does the glass ceiling still exist In a comparative perspective contributors from different countries provide answers to these questions By investigating the interrelationship between strategy and structure the articles in this study focus on the interconnectedness between the institutional environment of systems of higher education and the strategic behavior aspirations hopes and desires of female academics The book examines how such systems impact those women looking back on their career path those just starting to think about a career in academia or those on their way to applying for a leadership position at a university
