providing insurance cover in relation to risks associated with climate change As risk carriers insurers pay claims for climate change related losses such as property damage caused by windstorms flooding and wildfires which have been increasing in frequency and severity As major institutional investors insurance companies invest in assets that may be increasingly vulnerable to climate risks Insurance regulators across the globe have therefore started to require insurance companies to identify manage and report on climate change risks that could pose a threat to their financial stability However managing and reporting on the effect of climate risk on an insurer s balance sheet is an inward looking perspective that does not stem climate change It needs to be paired with an outward looking perspective that takes account of the insurance industry s impact on the environment and the insurance industry s capacity to influence what policyholders investee enterprises and other business partners do to address climate change challenges For the insurance industry the key components of positive outward impact are impact underwriting and impact investment This book sets out the current legal and regulatory landscape for impact underwriting and impact investment Whilst the focus of research and regulatory interventions to date has been on inward impact in this book it will be argued that to take positive climate action that supports the Paris Agreement goals and the national and international Net Zero targets the debate should now move on to considering the positive outward impact the insurance industry can make and how we can create a legal environment to facilitate this The book puts forward the case for a new vision of the role of the insurance industry as climate action enablers and makes proposals for insurance products and risk transfer and loss resilience structures that can support policyholders in their transition to a Net Zero economy The audience for this book will include legal practitioners insurance industry professionals financial and insurance regulators policymakers and interested academics

Law, Environmental Illness and Medical Uncertainty Tarryn Phillips, 2015-03-05 We ve seen it before with asbestos related disease leukaemia clusters and lung cancer caused by cigarettes There tends to be a lag between the emergence of environmental risks and chemical injuries and their recognition and therapeutic treatment by medicine and the law Law Environmental Illness and Medical Uncertainty examines how our society governs new health concerns as they emerge and the barriers that face new and uncertain theories seeking recognition in the law In this book Tarryn Phillips focuses her investigation on the struggle over the controversial condition multiple chemical sensitivities or MCS also known as environmental illness Presenting nine case studies where workers sought compensation for MCS from their multinational employers she captures a nuanced portrait of their embittered unequal battles over the scientific legal and insurance paradigms for understanding toxic risk environmental illness and the regulation of industry It draws on three years of fieldwork in Australia including interview data with lay people and sympathetic and sceptical experts participant observation in the courtroom and textual analysis of official reports The book gives a unique ethnographic insight into the governance of risk and uncertainty within a neoliberal economy medico scientific controversies and courtroom dramas It highlights how a skeptical approach towards emergent environmental concerns is encouraged within the current regime and decision makers face disincentives for taking a sympathetic approach Compellingly written and easy to read it should appeal widely to interested lay people and students and scholars of science and technology studies medical anthropology sociology of health and illness and critical legal studies
