Revision of the Plant Bug Genus Tytthus (Hemiptera, Heteroptera, Miridae, Phylinae) Thomas J. Henry, 2012-09-10 A revision and the first phylogenetic analysis of the widely distributed plant bug genus Tytthus is presented All 24 species of this genus including five described as new prey exclusively on planthopper Delphacidae eggs making them of great importance on agricultural monocots Two species have been used successfully in biocontrol programs to suppress populations of sugarcane delphacid on sugarcane and brown planthopper on rice All species of Tytthus are relatively small but the tiny brachypterous males of one species ranging from 1.08-1.30 mm long rank it as possibly the world s smallest known plant bug Members of this genus are found in nearly all biogeographic regions including 18 restricted to the Nearctic and Neotropics and three from the eastern Oriental and Indo Pacific regions There are also two Holarctic and one circumtropical Afrotropical Neotropical and Oriental species A hypothesized relationship with several Nearctic plant bug genera suggests a New World origin for this group of important predatory bugs couldn't make them up Chronicle of the Horse ,1991-04 *A revision of the New World species of *Gymnoclasiopa Hendel (Diptera, Ephydriidae) Wayne N. Mathis, Tadeusz Zatwarnicki, 2012-12-05 This revision comprehensively documents the New World species of the shore fly genus Gymnoclasiopa which primarily has a Holarctic distribution including some species that are found in both the Nearctic and Palearctic Regions Discovering additional species common to both biogeographic regions was an objective of this study as was unraveling any nomenclatural issues that resulted when the same species was described separately in both biogeographic regions Ten species are treated including two that are newly described The authors also document the obvious sexual dimorphism that is evident in some species but which was not previously appreciated resulting in confused concepts of some species The authors emphasize structures of the male terminalia which are fully described and illustrated in the recognition of species In addition detailed locality data and distribution maps for all species are provided Much of this increase has resulted from a greatly improved sampling of the New World fauna documenting the ongoing need for field work and better taxon sampling of the earth's shore fly fauna
