Ponterotto, 2008 Handbook of Multicultural Assessment offers the most comprehensive text on testing of racial and ethnic minorities in the United States This thoroughly revised and updated edition includes the most current and state of the art assessment information in a variety of psychological and educational domains The book highlights new and innovative testing practices and expands the populations of interest to include recent immigrants and refugees It also includes ways to overcome barriers in the assessment process as well as forensic assessment This important resource offers an instructional text for conducting culturally competent psychological assessment for clinicians educators and researchers

Oxford Textbook of Migrant Psychiatry Dinesh Bhugra, 2021-02-04 Migrant psychiatry is an evolving subdiscipline within cultural psychiatry that deals with the impact of migration on the mental health of those who have migrated and those who work with these groups and provide services to them Stress related to migration affects migrants and their extended families either directly or indirectly The process of migration is not just a phase but leads on to a series of adjustments including acculturation which may occur across generations Factors such as changes in diet attitudes and beliefs and overall adjustment are important in settling down and making the individuals feel secure This period of adjustment will depend upon the individual migrant s pre migration experiences migration process and post migration experiences but also upon an individual s personality social support and emotional response to migration Socio demographic factors such as age gender educational and economic status will all play a role in post migration adjustment In order to understand the impact on individuals not only the type of migration and different stressors but also the types of psychological mechanisms at a personal level and the resources and processes at a societal level need to be explored Despite the number of refugees and asylum seekers around the world increasing at an astonishing rate the mental health needs of migrants are often ignored by policy makers and clinicians The Oxford Textbook of Migrant Psychiatry is designed to serve as the comprehensive reference resource on the mental health of migrants bringing together both theoretical and practical aspects of the mental health needs of refugees and asylum seekers for researchers and professionals Individual chapters summarise theoretical constructs related to theories of migration the impact of migration on mental health and adjustment collective trauma individual identity and diagnostic fallacies The book also covers the practical aspects of patient management including cultural factors ethnopsychopharmacology therapeutic interaction and therapeutic expectation and psychotherapy Finally the book will examine special clinical problems and special patient groups Part of the authoritative Oxford Textbooks in Psychiatry series this resource will serve as an essential reference for psychiatrists mental health professionals general practitioners primary care physicians social workers policy makers and voluntary agencies dealing with refugees and asylum seekers

The Psychologist ,2007 Community Interpreters Speaking for Themselves Clare Louise Shakespeare,2012 Background Community interpreters are employed to work across multiple settings in the UK including mental health services to support individuals whose first language is not English To date little research attention has been paid to the emotional impact of mental health interpreting on community interpreters Aims The aim of this study is to develop an in depth understanding of the emotional challenges of mental health interpreting and the coping strategies employed by community interpreters to overcome these challenges It is hoped that this research will raise practitioners awareness and help guide health services to support interpreters better to enable the highest standards of care for clients Methodology Semi structured interviews were conducted with eight community interpreters working in mental health settings The interview transcripts were analysed using Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis IPA Results Four master themes emerged from analysis Feeling for the client Relationships in Context Balancing the personal self and the professional self and You need to protect yourself These master themes along with the subthemes contributing to them are expanded in to a narrative account of interpreters experiences Conclusions This study has underscored the need for increased provision of support for interpreters as well as training for practitioners in working with interpreters Guidance for improved working relationships between interpreters practitioners and employing agencies is given

American Translators Association Scholarly Monograph Series ,1994 Canadian Journal of Psychiatry ,2003 The Experiences of Interpreters Working in a Medium Secure Forensic Mental Health Unit Eleanor Molle,2012 People from ethnic minorities are vastly over represented within forensic mental health services in the UK and Wales Within one medium secure forensic mental health unit MSU in London 20 48% of patients detained in March 2012 did not speak English Extensive legislation prescribes that there must be equal access for all to health services Due to the paucity of bilingual workers interpreters are a necessity There are significant gaps in the research literature about the work of interpreters in forensic mental health The current study set out to explore the experiences and understandings of interpreters who have undertaken interpreting jobs in a MSU Six interpreters were interviewed using semi structured interviews and their accounts analysed using Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis

IPA Five super ordinate themes were identified 1 Setting the scene Medium secure forensic mental health units 2 Unrecognised professional identity 3 The MSU interpreters A superior professional excellence or mere mortals 4 Catch 22 and 5 The MSU interpreter and the MSU patient The results draw together the participants phenomenological experiences of working in a MSU portraying the uniqueness of the MSU environmental setting the disparaging ways in which the participants perceive that they are viewed the grounds on which they argue for their occupation to be perceived as a recognised profession the resulting paradoxical situation in which they find themselves and the relationship aspects of interpreting for a patient who is detained in a MSU The study proposes that a means of overcoming the difficulties and conflicts experienced by interpreters working within this setting would inevitably involve the creation of specific and tailored guidelines for other professionals working with interpreters in a MSU also the availability of detailed information booklets for interpreters working in a MSU Further recommendations for mandatory training for both the service provider and the interpreter and the compulsory provision of support and supervision for interpreters are proposed

The Experiences of Interpreters in Mental Health Encounters-a Qualitative Study Meera Siddharth,2022 It has been recognized that high quality communication is required to help improve shared decision making between clinicians and patients This makes the role of the interpreter all the more important to help LEP or emerging English speakers in mental health encounters While there are many studies on the clinician and patient experiences in cross cultural mental health encounters there are only a few qualitative studies that look at the interpreter experiences in a mental health context As mental health issues in LEP or emerging English speakers increase there is a gap in the literature as to how to successfully improve the quality of care using interpreters in mental health encounters Using qualitative methods this study aims to address this gap by exploring the experiences of interpreters when interpreting for mental health encounters Seventeen interpreters from the Philadelphia area were interviewed representing 19 languages 8 Spanish only 1 Nepali only the rest interpret for multiple languages They were asked about the following 1 challenging experiences in the triadic relationship between interpreter clinician and patient when discussing mental and emotional health 2 their experiences in interpreting mental health concepts into another language 3 their experiences in culture brokering and 4 their opinions on how to improve mental health encounters using interpreters Findings include that mental health concepts and queries can be challenging to translate due to language differences structure limited vocabulary cultural differences including stigma the interpreter is often called to cross boundaries by both patient and clinician many interpreters desire mental health training and feel that clinicians need training on how to work with interpreters The use of these findings can help support the agency and autonomy of emerging English speakers in mental health encounters
