Devon Smugglers' Pubs TERRY. TOWNSEND,2019-04-16 East Devon smugglers of old risked life and liberty to improve the lot of their impoverished families by supplying untaxed goods to eager paying customers Their area of enterprise encompassed the sweep of Lyme Bay from the River Axeto the River Teign where the expanse of rugged coastline and challenging interior were policed by Preventive Men based in the Custom House on Exeter Quay open today as a visitor centre This superbly illustrated guide follows smugglers trails revealing contraband landing beaches secret hiding places and grand homes of aristocrats who helped finance the unlawful activities Significant churches and churchyards are disclosed where contraband was hidden inside bell towers and table top tombs During the smuggling era the pub was the hub of rural communities and many functioned as the nerve centre for clandestine operations Numerous landlords were directly involved in these nefarious goings on and all were happy to buy spirits and tobacco at the right price It was in these dens of iniquity with their low beamed ceilings flagstone floors and inglenook fireplaces that plots were hatched arrangements for transportation agreed and smuggling run commissioned When visiting these wonderful old buildings today little imagination is required to sense the desperate days of the men who called themselves free traders DEVON SMUGGLERS. ROBERT.
